

I feel that Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation. This smacks of the days of pre-Nazi Germany and makes me very nervous.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. I feel that when huge corporations with a political agenda control our media, the country gets spoonfed a preset agenda instead of facts that we need to make decisions about who governs us.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
